CONTRACTORS PACIFIC NAVAL AIR BASES

The following contracting firms became associated as Contractors Pacific Naval Air Bases for the purpose of building bases on the Pacific Islands for the Navy:

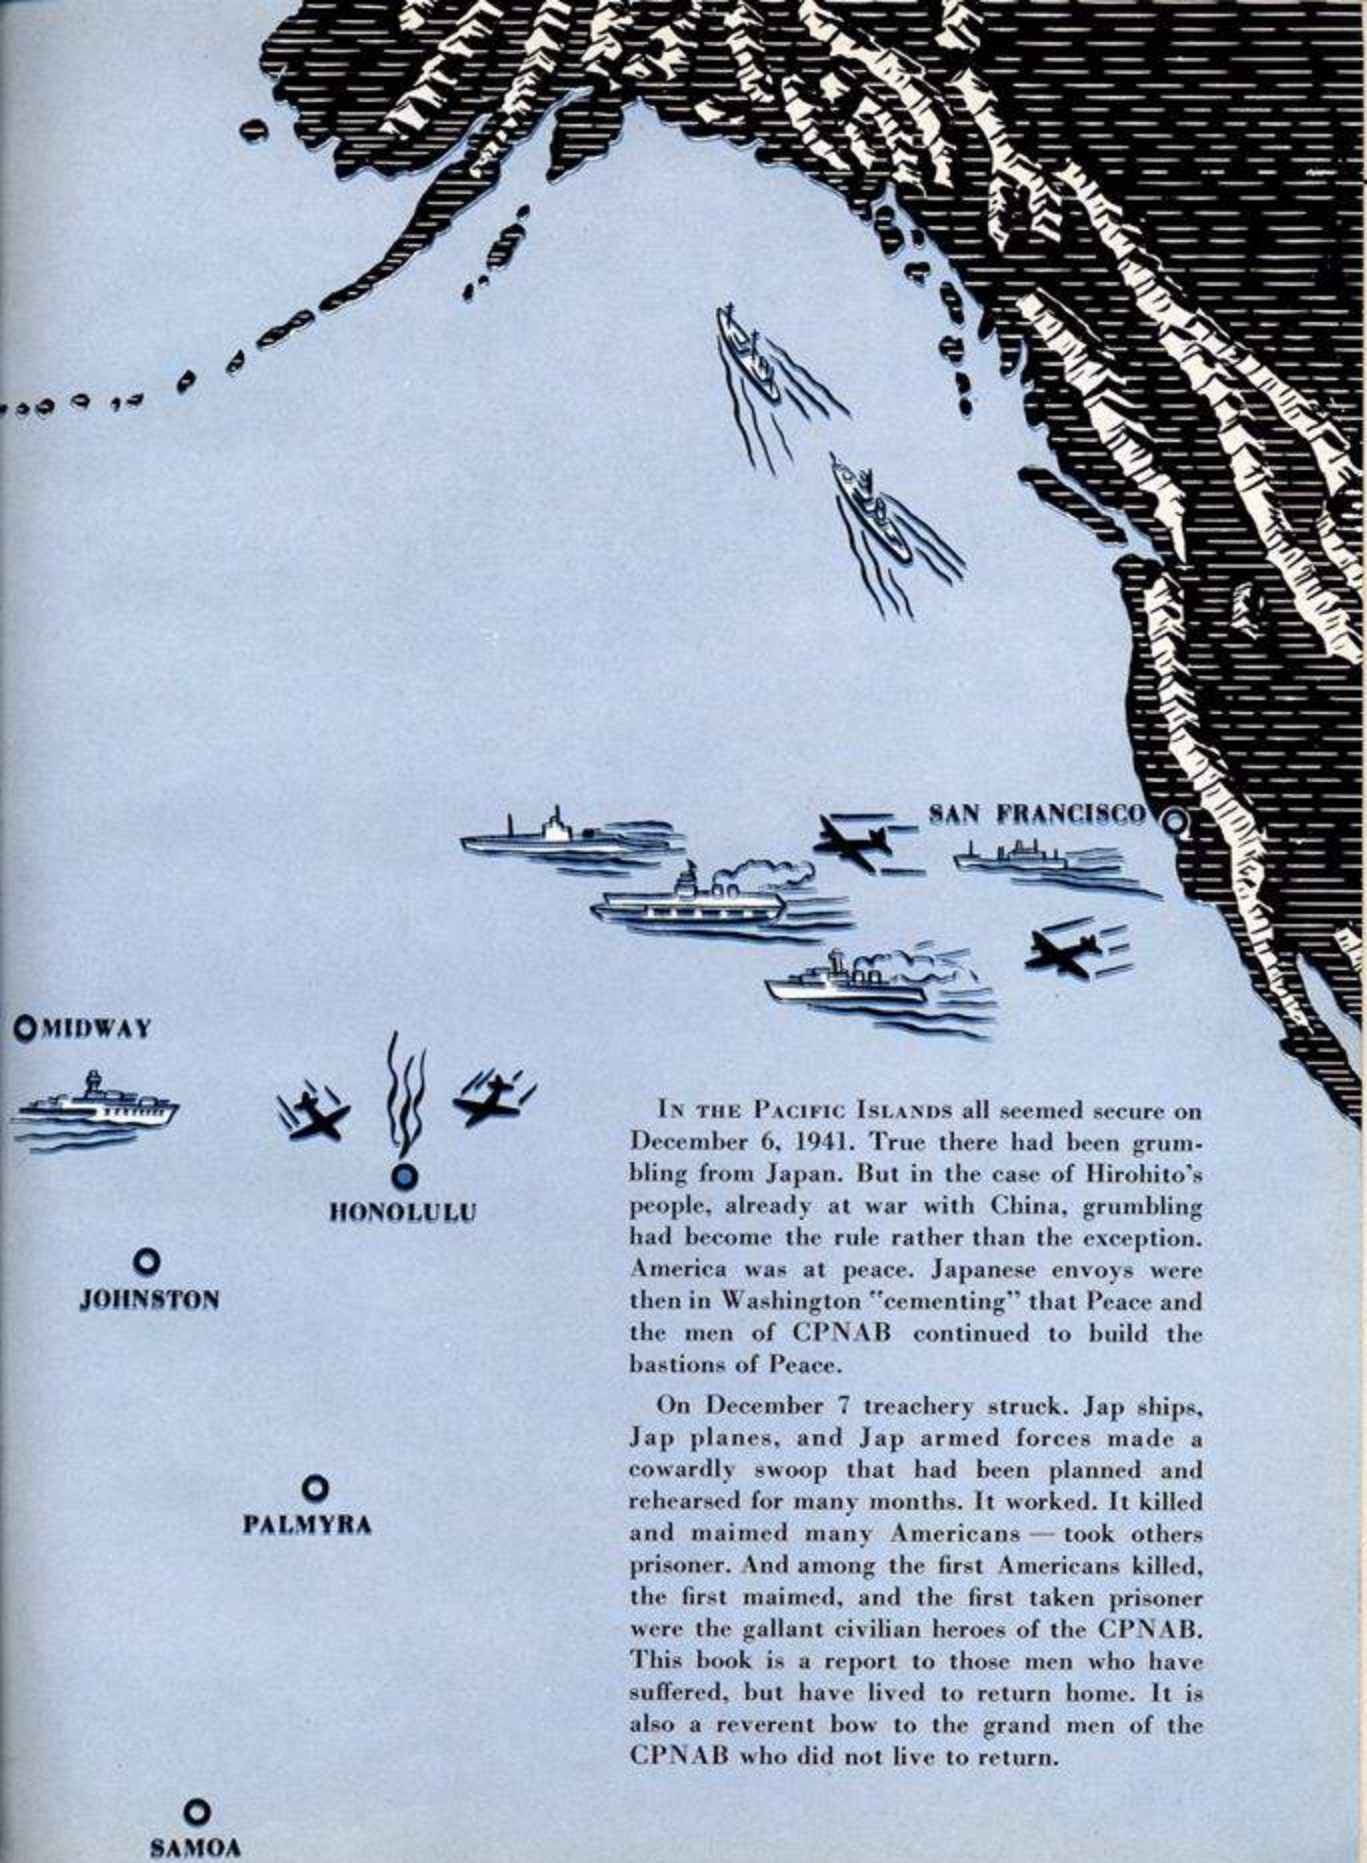

W. A. Bechtel Company, San Francisco, California
Byrne Organization, Norfolk, Virginia
Hawaiian Dredging Company, Ltd., Honolulu, T.H.
Morrison-Knudsen Company, Inc., Boise, Idaho
J. H. Pomeroy & Co., Inc., San Francisco, California
Raymond Concrete Pile Company, New York City, New York
Turner Construction Company, New York City, New York
The Utah Construction Company, San Francisco, California

The work was of tremendous scope and involved heavy construction on many Pacific Islands, including Hawaii, the Philippines, Midway, Wake, Guam, Johnston, Samoa and Palmyra.

Each contracting firm sponsored and had charge of one or more of the jobs on these islands. Work at all of these points was in full progress in 1941 and many men from the mainland were employed at the various sites at the time of the Japanese attack at Pearl Harbor on December 7, 1941.

How Japan's Sneak Punch Hit CPNAB Workers

IN THE PACIFIC ISLANDS all seemed secure on December 6, 1941. True there had been grumbling from Japan. But in the case of Hirohito's people, already at war with China, grumbling had become the rule rather than the exception. America was at peace. Japanese envoys were then in Washington "cementing" that Peace and the men of CPNAB continued to build the bastions of Peace.

On December 7 treachery struck. Jap ships, Jap planes, and Jap armed forces made a cowardly swoop that had been planned and rehearsed for many months. It worked. It killed and maimed many Americans — took others prisoner. And among the first Americans killed, the first maimed, and the first taken prisoner were the gallant civilian heroes of the CPNAB. This book is a report to those men who have suffered, but have lived to return home. It is also a reverent bow to the grand men of the CPNAB who did not live to return.

THE REPORT

*Conditions on Pacific Islands Following
December 7, 1941*

Work was stopped by enemy action on Midway, Wake, Guam, and at Cavite from the time of the Japanese attack, and at other points shortly thereafter. Midway and the Hawaiian Islands were not taken by the enemy. Guam was not prepared to offer defense and surrendered on December 9, 1941; Wake, after an heroic defense, surrendered on December 23, 1941; work stopped at Cavite with the first Japanese attack, but fighting continued around Manila until the surrender of Corregidor on May 6, 1942.

*Conditions on Mainland Following
December 7, 1941*

There was a long period of uncertainty following the Japanese attacks. The fate of the men on the captured islands was unknown. Whether they all had been killed or whether taken prisoners was an unanswered question for months.

In the meantime, a voluntary organization called The Pacific Island Workers Association was formed by the families of the men for the purpose of securing information regarding the fate of the employees. What little information the Association was able to gather was passed on to the families.

A REPORT

It was not until the last of April, 1942, that the names of some of the men in the Woo Sung, China, camp were received through the International Red Cross. This information was a great relief, particularly so after additional names began to be received. By late 1944 every one was accounted for except 153 Wake men, and it was believed these were in Japanese camps, although they had not been officially reported.

When the first prisoners were reported in late April, 1942, Contractors Pacific Naval Air Bases instructed the Department of State to authorize the Swiss Government to advance each interned employee the maximum amount of money monthly that the Japanese would permit. No word has ever been received that this monthly advance was made, and whether the failure was due to the refusal of the Japanese to permit it or the failure of the Swiss representative to advance it is unknown. The Contractors regret very much that their request to supply the men with pocket money was not followed.

*Financial Arrangements of Employees on Wake,
Guam and at Cavite*

Guam and Cavite had banking facilities, and all employees at these points were paid on the job and did their own banking and made their own arrangements for remitting to their dependents. Those who deposited their money in Guam and Manila banks, of course, lost it when these banks were taken over by the Japanese. Since the recapture by American forces of Manila and Guam, banking facilities will be resumed by the end of 1945. Consequently all who had deposits in the various banks in Manila and on Guam will be able to recover their balance.

Wake had no banking facilities, so it was necessary for all Wake employees to allot all but a small amount of their pay to a dependent or a personal bank account. The amount withheld from the allotment never exceeded $25 a month and was used to make personal purchases. Any amounts not used remained as a credit to the employee in the Unpaid Wages, Overtime and Bonus Account, and are payable to him along with his overtime and bonus.

Stoppage of Work and Pay

Work at the attacked points stopped with the attack, and the Navy could not reimburse the Contractors for work not performed. While the Navy did not cancel the contracts for construction in the Pacific Islands or the employment agreements thereunder between the employees and the Contractors, the effect was the same because part of the work under these contracts was impossible of performance due to enemy action. The pay of both the Contractors and employees therefore stopped with the Japanese attacks.

Effect of Pay Stoppage on Dependents

With the stoppage of wages, the dependents of those employees who had dependents, also had their allotments and remittances stopped. This was a very serious situation, as most families were entirely dependent on the monthly allotment or remittance. Without it they were left in need. To relieve cases of immediate actual distress, varying amounts were advanced to these families by the Contractors as a temporary assistance.

Steps Taken for Relief of Dependents

Finally the Navy authorized the Contractors to make full payment of December, 1941, wages for the account of the Wake, Guam and Cavite employees. This afforded some temporary relief. In January, 1942, the Navy employed the Liberty Mutual Insurance Company to investigate each employee to determine which employees had dependents and who the dependents were. The Liberty Mutual was under contract to complete the investigation by March 1, 1942. On January 30, 1942, the Navy, pending completion of the Liberty Mutual investigation, authorized the Contractors to make a payment of $100 for January, 1942, to dependents as taken from the office records of the Contractors. The Navy authorized the Contractors to make a further payment of $100 for February, 1942, to dependents as developed by the Liberty Mutual investigation.

Social Security Payments to Dependents

In February, 1942, the sum of five million dollars, known as the Civilian War Relief Fund, was set aside by Presidential decree for the relief of dependents of civilians detained or missing as the result of enemy action. This fund was to be administered by the Social Security Board under the rules and regulations and at the rates provided under the Old Age Pension Plan of the Social Security Act. The dependents of the detained and missing employees came under this Fund, and effective March 1, 1942, payments to them started. The amounts payable monthly were inadequate to meet necessary living expenses and wholly insufficient to meet any unusual expense, such as sickness, etc. Following are the monthly payments under the Old Age Pension Section of the Social Security Act:

Wife.....	$45.00
Wife and 1 child.....	60.00
Wife and 2 children.....	75.00
Wife and 3 or more children.....	85.00
1 Parent.....	30.00
2 Parents.....	45.00

Other varying amounts were payable to other dependents, but $85 was the maximum amount which could be paid the dependents of any employee, and this was only payable where there were three or more children. In addition, it was necessary to prove in the case of a dependent parent that 50 per cent or more of the parent's support had been provided by the employee.

*Public Law 490,
77th Congress*

Early in 1942 the Contractors started efforts to secure the passage of a law by Congress to provide adequate rates of pay for the Wake, Guam and Cavite employees and payments for their dependents. Such a law appeared to be embodied in Public Law 490 passed by the 77th Congress and signed by the President on March 7, 1942. This Act provided for

"continuing payment of pay and allowances of personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard, including the retired and Reserve components thereof; the Coast and Geodetic Survey and the Public Health Service, and civilian employees of the executive departments, independent establishments, and agencies, during periods of absence from post of duty and for other purposes."

A REPORT

When this bill, known as the Walsh Bill, was on debate in the Senate, Senator Walsh was asked if the provisions of the bill covered the employees of the Contractors, and he answered that they did. It was thus taken for a fact that the contracted pay of the employees had been assured by the action of Congress. However, after Public Law 490 was signed, it was found this was not the case and that "civilian employees" covered in the law referred only to civilians on the pay rolls of the United States and not to civilian employees of the Contractors, who were only indirectly paid by the Navy. Thus, while the law provided full pay, allowances, seniority increases, etc., for the Armed Forces on Wake, Guam and at Cavite during the time of their detention by the enemy, no provision was included for the Contractors' men who were captured at these same points.

*The Pacific Island
Employees
Foundation, Inc.*

With the failure of Public Law 490 to provide pay for either the employees or their dependents, Contractors Pacific Naval Air Bases sought some means of assisting the employees' families until necessary legislation could be secured or the employees were returned home. As a result, the Pacific Island Employees Foundation was incorporated on June 1, 1942. The work of this organization will be explained later in this brochure.

*Public Law 784,
77th Congress*

After it was found early in 1942 that Public Law 490 did not cover the missing and detained employees, the Contractors immediately started action in Washington to secure legislation for the employees' relief. Several bills were introduced in the House and Senate, and finally the bill known as S2412 seemed to have the best chance of passage. Hearings were held and representatives of the American Federation of Labor, the Army, Navy, and other Government agencies appeared in behalf of the bill. It was passed and became Public Law 784, 77th Congress, by the signature of the President on December 2, 1942.

Sec. 101 (b) covers the missing and detained employees and their dependents. It provides the same rates of pay for the employees and the same payments to their dependents as are provided in the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, except that only the maximum rates of the latter law are used. The payments were retroactive to date of detention, but as the Navy had already authorized the payment of full wages for December, 1941, the actual date credits started was January 1, 1942. The law provides that each missing and detained employee is credited with $108.33 per month ($1300 per year) from January 1, 1942, to the date of his return to the mainland. (Note: It will be explained further on that this credit continued only to December 31, 1943.) The monthly credit accumulated and the total accumulation is payable from the United States Treasury. In addition to providing the above monthly credit, the law provides for payments to dependents, but such payments to dependents are at the rates fixed by the Longshoremen's and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act at the death of a worker under that Act. These monthly rates are:

Wife.....	$ 56.88
Wife and 1 child.....	73.13
Wife and 2 children.....	89.38
Wife and 3 children.....	105.63
Wife and 4 or more children.....	108.33
1 Parent.....	40.62
2 Parents.....	81.24

A comparison of these rates with the rates paid by Social Security shows an improvement, but still an insufficient amount in many cases. Varying amounts were payable to other dependents, but the above represents the principal classes of dependents. The maximum amount available for dependents is, of course, $108.33 per month. These payments to dependents started January 1, 1943, and continued to December 31, 1943. This law was administered by the U.S. Employees Compensation Commission, whose main office is 285 Madison Avenue, New York 17, New York.

This Commission decided that the payments made by the Navy to dependents for January and February, 1942, and by the Social Security Board from March 1, 1942, to December 31, 1942, will not be deducted from the credit of the employee. Each employee therefore will have clear the full credit of $108.33 per month for the year 1942. However, payments made to dependents during 1943 are charged against the amount credited to the employee. The law provides benefits for dependents in the event the death of the employee is established, while he is missing or detained. The benefits in case of death are at the same rates as listed above and are payable, with certain exceptions, until the total payments amount to $7500.00. Any payments made prior to the established date of death are in addition to death benefits. In addition to the above benefits, disability benefits are payable after detention benefits stop if the physical condition of the returned man is such that he is unable to enter employment. This is the principal reason for hospitalization and physical examination on arrival. The U.S. Employees Compensation Commission decides all cases of disability claims.

*Public Law 216,
78th Congress*

While Public Law 784 made some provision in lieu of wages, Contractors Pacific Naval Air Bases felt that more liberal treatment should be received by the employees and their dependents, and this feeling was reciprocated by the Navy. Through the cooperation of the Navy and the untiring efforts of a few individuals, passage by the 78th Congress of Public Law 216 was secured in December, 1943, and was signed by the President on December 23, 1943. It is effective from January 1, 1944. It is an amendment to Public Law 784, and provides:

"The amount of benefits to be credited to the account of such person * * * shall be 100 per centum of the average weekly wages of such person, except that in computing such benefits, such average weekly wages (a) shall not exceed the average weekly wages paid to civilian employees of the United States in the same or most similar occupation in the area nearest to the place of employment where such person was last employed, and (b) shall not exceed the average weekly wages of such absent person at the time such absence began * * *."

When the law was passed, it was thought that finally a fair and just arrangement, so far as wages were concerned, had been secured and that rates being paid by the Government to contractors' civilian employees in the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands in occupations similar or most similar to the occupations of the men employed by Contractors Pacific Naval Air Bases on Wake, Guam and at Cavite, would be the rates used. Too late it was learned that "civilian employees of the United States" are only those civilians directly on the pay rolls of the United States and civilian employees of contractors working on Government projects are not "civilian employees of the United States." Thus, instead of using the occupations of contractors doing work on Government contracts with the corresponding wage rate, the U.S. Employees Compensation Commission had to use the occupations and rates listed in the 1940 Civil Service Schedule. Not many of these occupations are similar to the occupations of men working for contractors. The U.S. Employees Compensation Commission classified the occupations in as liberal a manner as possible so that most employees are receiving their basic wage rates or better, and efforts are being made which may result in an improvement in those cases where less than the basic wage rate is being paid.

Where there are dependents, the law provides that 70 per centum of the fixed wage rate shall be payable to dependents. If the dependents are other than a wife, or wife and children, and if the 70 per cent would give other classes of dependents an excessive allowance, the Commission is authorized to adjust the allowance. Payments made to dependents are charged against the wage credited to the employee. Benefits payable in case of the death of the employee while missing or detained are the same as under Public Law 784, and payments received by the dependent prior to the death of the employee are in addition to the death benefits.

Unpaid Wages, Overtime and Bonus Account

At the time of the Japanese attack, Contractors Pacific Naval Air Bases had on deposit in Honolulu a large sum representing the accumulated overtime and bonus earned on the work and any unpaid wages which might have been due and not drawn. The overtime covers through October, 1941, only, as time rolls for November, 1941, did not reach Honolulu. Early in 1942 this fund was transferred to banks on the Mainland. This fund was under the control of the Navy, and no payments could be made from it except on a Court order. A few states have laws under which it is possible for a dependent to be appointed trustee of a missing person's estate. A small number of dependents applied for appointment as trustees and filed certified copies of the necessary papers with the Contractors and received the amount due that particular employee. In 1944 this fund was turned over to the Navy under arrangements which will permit prompt payment to each employee by the Contractors.

Monies Due on Repatriation

Each repatriated employee will have due him on his return certain sums from the following sources:

1. Overtime and bonus and any undrawn wages due at the time of the Japanese attack. These amounts can be paid promptly upon identification.

2. Employees who had no dependents will have due them under Public Law 784 the accumulated sum of $108.33 per month from January 1, 1942, through December 31, 1943, and under Public Law 216 the accumulated monthly wage fixed for his particular occupation from January 1, 1944, to the date of his return. These accumulated amounts will be payable from the United States Treasury on completion of claim papers as determined by the U.S. Employees Compensation Commission. It will probably take some time for these claims to go through the necessary routine and be paid. The Commission can, however, advance necessary expense money for transportation and subsistence for each employee to reach his home and will make a substantial cash advance within a few days of arrival.
3. Employees with dependents will have monies due from the same sources as men without dependents, but there will be deducted from the amount credited to them, the total amount paid to their dependents from January 1, 1943, to December 31, 1943, under Public Law 784 and the total amount paid their dependents from January 1, 1944, to date of their return under Public Law 216.

The Contractors will arrange for assistance to be given the employees in preparing their claims under Public Laws 784 and 216 and in securing as prompt settlements as is possible.

Resume

The Contractors Pacific Naval Air Bases, realizing the long time the employees have been out of reach with their personal affairs on the Mainland, have taken this means to inform them of the efforts which have been made on their behalf during their enforced absence. Only facts have been presented, and if any pertinent information has been omitted, it is entirely unintentional. We want each man to feel that the Contractors have had the interests of all the men at heart at all times and have done everything in their power to secure favorable legislation and to alleviate both the financial and mental suffering of their families.

*The Pacific Island
Employees
Foundation, Inc.*

Following the attack on Wake, Guam and Cavite, the families of the employees were naturally frantic with worry and uncertainty as to the fate of their loved ones. In addition, many families were in straitened financial condition due to the failure to receive their customary allotments and remittances. Mental worry prevented many from using their customary good judgment, and they did not know which way to turn. It was soon apparent that it would be necessary for many of them to receive financial assistance in order for them to have the bare necessities of life.

Early in 1942 the Contractors Pacific Naval Air Bases realized this situation and began investigation of various established agencies to see if any were organized in a manner which would permit them to take on the additional duty of looking after the welfare of the dependents of the missing and detained employees. There did not seem to be any suitable agency for the purpose. After giving the matter much thought and investigation, the Pacific Island Employees Foundation was incorporated on June 1, 1942, under the laws of Idaho.

The Foundation was organized strictly as a charitable institution and its object was to provide assistance in all cases of need with funds received from donations. Contractors Pacific Naval Air Bases did not expect the general public to make donations for the purpose of carrying on the Foundation but expected to donate the necessary funds themselves. Since the formation of the Foundation, very large sums have been donated to it by the Contractors. In no case have the Contractors influenced the actions of the Directors of the Foundation; the Directors have been free to use the donated funds as they thought best. When the need for the Foundation is over, any funds on hand can not be returned to the Contractors, but must be distributed to some worthy comparable charity. The Foundation has taken no part for or against any legislation, but has confined its activities strictly to the objects for which it was formed.

An investigation was quickly conducted in all cases where the records showed an employee had dependents and where it was found the family income was insufficient to meet necessary living expenses, a monthly donation was made. In many cases the income, while large enough to take care of ordinary living expenses, was too small to meet unusual expenses such as medical attention, etc., and in these cases the Foundation sent checks to take care of the unusual expense. It was impossible to assure each family the same income as was received prior to the Japanese attack, but a sincere effort was made to see that no family suffered for lack of the necessities of life.

The greatest need for assistance was during 1942, as the payments received from Social Security were small. In 1943 the monthly payments under Public Law 784 were a little larger, and with the larger income the need for assistance decreased somewhat and the financial position of the dependents also improved by reason of many of them going to work in defense jobs. In 1944, due to the passage of Public Law 216, dependents began receiving much larger incomes, and it became unnecessary for the Foundation to give financial assistance except in a very few cases. At each Christmas time the Foundation sent checks to each minor child.

Following is an analysis of the assistance given by the Foundation (to September 1, 1945):

The Foundation, shortly after it began operations, received many letters seeking information regarding everything connected with the welfare of the employees. These inquiries came not only from dependents, but from relatives and friends of all the men who had been on Wake, Guam and at Cavite. All inquiries were answered and starting in October, 1942, the Foundation began sending out general letters to a mailing list of nearly 1500 relatives and friends of the men. These letters were issued from time to time, and through this means the families were kept informed regarding all matters pertaining to their welfare and the welfare of their interned and missing relatives. The Foundation received hundreds of letters written from the internment camps to the families, and from these letters information was secured which was of interest to all the relatives, as it gave them a picture of conditions impossible to secure from any single letter.

Through contacts established with the Army, Navy, State Department and the American Red Cross, the Foundation was able to pass on to the families information which otherwise might have been difficult for them to receive. On the other hand, letters and cards which were received from the interned men and sent to the Foundation by their families enabled us, in many cases, to advise Government Departments of transfers of the men to various camps. Every one was deeply interested in securing an exchange, and the Foundation, through the State Department, was able to keep the families advised on the progress of negotiations, although the news was never very encouraging, as the Japanese refused to consider the interned employees as civilian internees, but classified them as prisoners of war.

After the passage of Public Law 784, a number of dependents who had received no benefits under Social Security began receiving a monthly payment under the new law through the efforts of the Foundation. This was particularly true of a number of dependent parents who received no Social Security payment because 50 per cent or more of their support had not been contributed by the employee.

The classification of occupations and the wage rate for the occupation as decided by the United States Employees Compensation Commission under the new wage law (Public Law 216) resulted in many injustices and inequalities in the wages fixed for many of the men. The Foundation took these cases up with the Commission, both by correspondence and personal appearance, and has been able to secure adjustments resulting in many thousands of dollars increases in the wages of these men. Not all of the cases have been decided, and some may not be until claims are filed.

The Foundation, through the generous donations of Contractors Pacific Naval Air Bases, has been able to give financial assistance where there was actual need and has endeavored to safeguard the interests of all the missing and detained men and to keep the families informed on all matters involving their own as well as the employees' welfare.

Brief Summary of Benefits Provided for Both Employees and Dependents

December, 1941—Wages for the full month authorized by the Navy.

January and February, 1942—One hundred dollars for each month authorized by the Navy to be paid to dependents.

March 1, 1942, to December 31, 1942—Social Security payments to dependents from Civilian War Relief Fund.

January 1, 1942, to December 31, 1943—Credit of $108.33 per month to employees under Public Law 784. Payments to dependents under the same law started January 1, 1943.

January 1, 1944—Public Law 216 fixing average weekly earnings the same as the Government was paying a civilian employee for the same employment became effective. Seventy per cent of the wages so fixed was available for the support of dependents.

From June 1, 1942, Pacific Islands Employees Foundation assisted dependents and looked after the interests of both dependents and employees.

PRISONERS OF WAR

Through the cooperation of the families, the Morrison-Knudsen Company was able to publish the pictures of many of the men who were on Wake, Guam and at Cavite in their monthly magazine, The Em Kayan. It was thought these pictures might enable you to recall many friends and experiences, so they are reproduced in the following pages.
